About the National Resource Center

HRSA’s National Resource Center (NRC) for Training and Technical Assistance (TTA) advances health center operational excellence through the development, coordination, and dissemination of training and technical assistance available to health centers nationwide.

Established in July 2017 with HRSA funding to the National Association for Community Health Centers (NACHC), the NRC serves as the vehicle through which 20 National Cooperative Agreement (NCA) entities collaborate and coordinate activities to support health centers. Click here for a full list of the 20 NCAs. In 2018, the NRC was joined by representatives from three primary care associations (PCAs) and two Health Center Controlled Networks (HCCNs).

The NRC has three main objectives:

1. Advance and operationalize a continuous health center learning system rooted in best practices, accelerated learning, improved coordination and reduced duplication;
2. Document and demonstrate the collective impact of TTA investments for the Health Center Program, particularly across the range of national cooperative agreements; and
3. Serve as a pathway for larger dissemination of implementation interventions, with special emphasis on Diabetes in the initial three-year project period.

NRC members provide training and technical assistance on a wide and diverse range of issues, including:

- Organizational and leadership development
- Clinical and financial management
- Site operation
- Practice transformation for health centers across the nation
- Capital Development
- Social Determinants of Health
- Diabetes
- And More

This project is/was supported by the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) under Cooperative Agreement U30CS16089 for $6,375,000.00. This information or content and conclusions are those of the author and should not be construed as the official position or policy of, nor should any endorsements be inferred by HRSA, HHS or the U.S. Government.
Association of Asian Pacific Community Health Organizations (AAPCHO) is a national organization representing health centers and community-based organizations (CBOs) serving Asian Americans, Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders (AA&NHPI). Many of the social and environmental factors that contribute to health disparities—unsafe, unstable housing, food insecurity, and a person’s access to disability benefits—can be remedied with legal services and expertise. A medical-legal partnership (MLP) is a practical intervention that hospitals and health centers use to respond to the Social Determinants of Health (SDOH) that adversely affect the health of their patients. In an MLP, lawyers who specialize in addressing SDOH work on-site with the health care team to provide patient-centered legal services to address complex and structural social problems that would otherwise not be addressed within the clinical setting. MLP teams also leverage their cross-sector expertise to advance policy changes that can benefit individual and population health. The National Center for Medical-Legal Partnership works to create conditions in which all health organizations can leverage and integrate legal services as a standard part of their SDOH response. NCMLP leads education, research, and technical assistance efforts to help make that goal a reality.

Founded in 1995, the nonprofit School-Based Health Alliance is the national voice for school-based health care. We advocate for health and education partnerships, especially the school-based health center (SBHC) model, to help young people thrive. We provide the field with high-quality resources, training, and motivation and inspiration to excel in their work. School-based health care practitioners, with their distinct expertise, knowledge, and experiences, play a vital role at the intersection of education and health care. By empowering them, we are redefining health for kids and teens. Our vision is that all children and adolescents are healthy and achieving at their fullest potential.
